Hi Bryan,

Sorry again for the delayed response! This has been the busiest week of 2022! I wanted to get back to you once I was done with firefighting :)

I thought you were asking questions out of your concern, and not as a journalist intending to publish the responses. That's why I tailored the responses to you. I have since done some research on your work, and I have a better understanding of what you do.

You can publish my earlier responses.

I'll always be available to answer legitimate questions about IFCN to increase public awareness of our work. For now, I am not committing to the routine series.

Now, let me ask you two questions. I don't plan to publish your responses anywhere or disclose them to anyone. It's out of my curiosity.

1. Do you consider yourself a journalist who does his coverage fairly?
2. Is there a reason why you don't do fact-checking yourself? Either on your site or join an established organization.

Have a great weekend!

Best,
